Although the forecast was accurate, Bill wasn't one to express his feelings for the POES NOAA11 Satellite Imager.

Every day you're using products from ITT Industries without noticing them. And we like it that way. Technology shouldn't be noticeable. IT should be reliable. Almost transparent. Whether we're building tiny valves for pharmaceutical production or the sensors that allow a farmer to monitor weather conditions, you'll never need to worry about our technology. Which is good. Because Bill doesn't like to get all worked up about aerospace technology anyway.

ABOUT DOUG MENEZ

"At the heart of my work is a deep curiosity about the human experience and what we all have in common. As a visual storyteller I believe my role is witness, but also messenger. Whether I'm shooting street photography, a global ad campaign or documenting corporate culture, I want my images to have an impact. I want to contribute to our culture and collective conscience through images that catch those milliseconds of reality that maybe nobody else will notice, but I do."

Documentary photographer and director Doug Menez once stood at the North Pole, crossed the Sahara, had tea with Stalin's daughter and held a chunk of Einstein's brain. Quitting his blues band in 1981, he began his career freelancing for Time, LIFE, Newsweek, Fortune, USA Today, the New York Times Magazine and many other publications. He covered the AIDS crisis, homelessness in America, politics, five Super Bowls and the Olympics. His portrait assignments include Presidents Bush, Sr. and Clinton, Cate Blanchett, Robert Redford, Lenny Kravitz, Mother Teresa, Jane Goodall and Hugh Jackman.

His award-winning advertising campaigns and corporate projects for global brands include Chevrolet, FedEx, Leica, GE, Chevron, HP, Coca Cola, Emirates Airlines, Charles Schwab and Microsoft. Menez' work has been honored by many organizations, including the Kelly Awards, The AOP London, The Cannes Festival, The One Show, The Art Director's Club of NY, Photo District News, The Epson Creativity Award, American Photography, the International Photography Awards, NY Photo Festival, Graphis, and Communication Arts.

Doug's fourth book, "Fearless Genius: The Digital Revolution in Silicon Valley 1985-2000," by Simon & Schuster's Atria Books, became a #1 bestseller on Amazon's photo book list and was published in the US, Japan, the UK, South Korea, Taiwan and China and translated into 17 languages. Over 100 million people worldwide have seen the project through the book, as well as exhibits, viral press and talks. A fine art exhibition of rare images of Silicon Valley's greatest innovators, including Steve Jobs, as they changed our world continues to travel. His extensive archive of over one million images was acquired by Stanford University Libraries in 2004. Doug divides his time between the Hudson Valley and NYC.
